Mini Personal Safety Prevention Plan

You Are Not Alone!

Mini Personal Safety Prevention Plan

Struggling with thoughts of self-harm and suicide, it's important to have a plan to help you get through these times. I would encourage you to work on this plan with your therapist or physician.

Let's look at gathering as much positive information as possible. First off, identify as many positive things as you can come up with to do instead of self-harming.

15 Positive Things to Do:

Good. Now, let's come up with as many places as we can go that would be safe for us. For example, going to the library or church where we would be around people, and would be less tempted to hurt ourselves.

15 Safe Places to Go:

Awesome. Now, lets come up with as many possible people and places you can call to talk if you are needing help—even if just to tell them how much you are struggling. Supportive Friends, Therapists, and Physicians can be added.

15 People/Places to Call:
